About the University of Western Sydney

UWS is one of Australia's largest urban universities, with over 37,000 student enrolments and over 2500 staff spread over six campuses across Greater Western Sydney.

As a young and dynamic institution, UWS shares the spirit, determination and sense of purpose of its Region – it is inspired by the promise and challenge of the future; it is unencumbered by the orthodoxies of the past; and is confident in its ability to make a real difference in the lives of its students and the communities it serves.

UWS brings knowledge to life for its students and positive change to its communities through its contemporary, high-quality education programs, its world-leading research, and its exemplary engagement with the Region.

One of the defining strengths of the University is its passion for opening up access and creating equity in higher education.

UWS has long been committed to improving the educational outcomes in Greater Western Sydney, and to widening participation in university.

This is reflected in the student profile, with 40 per cent of UWS students the first in their family to attend university, and 70 per cent proud Greater Western Sydney locals. The UWS community is also one of the most culturally diverse, with some 174 different nationalities represented.

UWS and its region

UWS is located in one of the nation's fastest-growing areas - Greater Western Sydney, home to over 1.8 million people. It covers some 9000 square kilometres, spans 14 Local Government Areas, and is home to Australia's third largest economy behind the Sydney CBD and Melbourne.

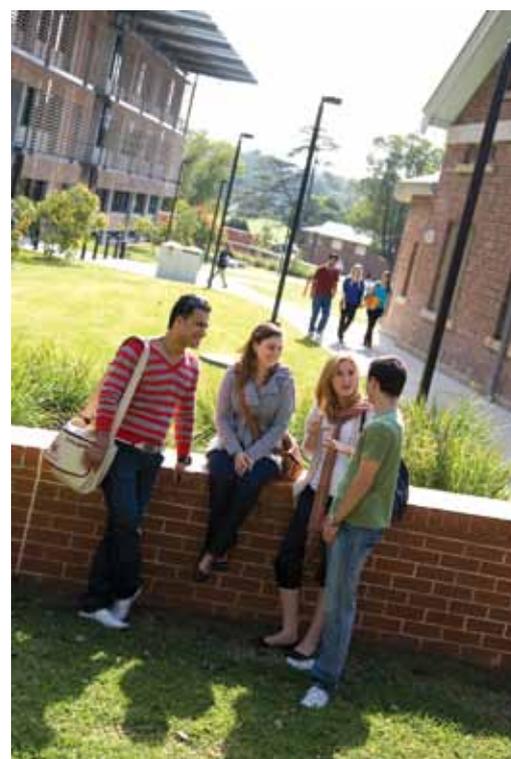

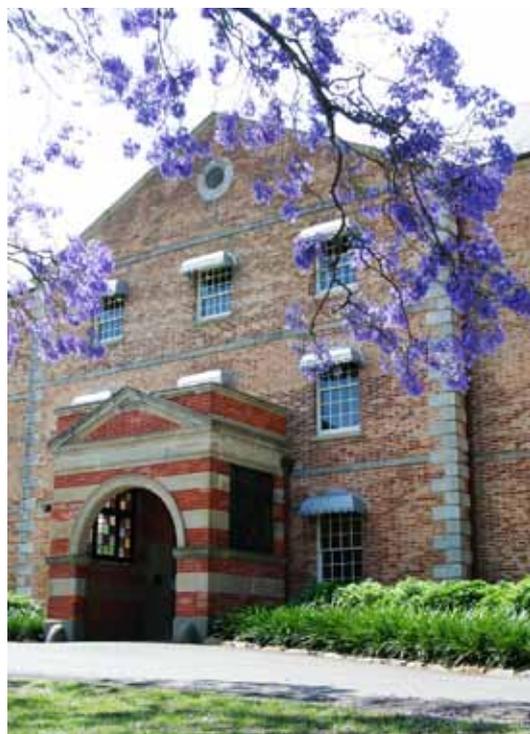

It is one of the most diverse multicultural communities in the world – a vibrant mix of different cultures, ethnicities and faiths. Greater Western Sydney is also home to the largest urban Indigenous population in Australia.

The UWS Parramatta campus

The University of Western Sydney's Parramatta campus is located in the Sydney suburb of Rydalmere, on the corner of Victoria Road and James Ruse Drive.

It is just 10 minutes from the major commercial and retail centre of Parramatta.

The Parramatta campus is alive with activity. It is home to thousands of students and staff, state-of-the-art teaching buildings and library, international student office, student centre, cafes and more.

The campus is located on the shore of the Parramatta River and has a rich history. The campus centrepiece is the magnificent Female Orphan School - the first purpose-built orphanage in the colony of New South Wales.

The Female Orphan School is the oldest three-storey brick building in Australia, predating Hyde Park Barracks in Sydney and the Female Factory in Parramatta.

Its foundation stone was laid in 1813, with the building constructed under the direction of Governor Macquarie and his wife, Mrs Elizabeth Macquarie, to provide for the support and education of destitute girls of the colony.

It's the one of the earliest buildings to be conceived and designed by a woman to house female occupants, with Elizabeth Macquarie widely credited as influencing the building's Palladian design, which was based on her childhood home, Airds, in Scotland.

The School expanded in 1850 to include orphaned boys, but was closed in 1887 when a change in government policy favoured placing orphans with foster families.

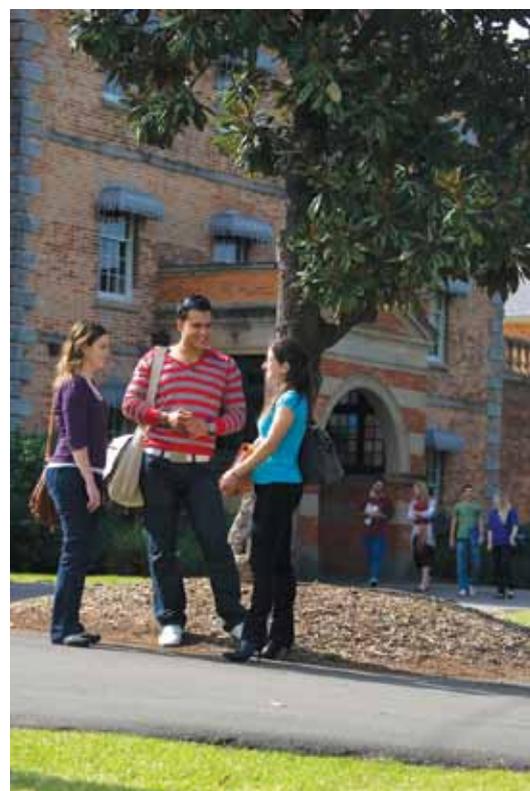

In 1888, the building became the Rydalmere Hospital for the Insane. The psychiatric hospital operated for some 90 years, until the hospital was gradually closed down during the 1980s.

The building was derelict and had been vacant for many years until the University took over the site in 1997.

As custodians of the Female Orphan School, UWS has committed over $5 million over the past ten years to the conservation of the external fabric of the whole complex, and the conservation and adaptive re-use of the interiors of the original three-storey central building.

The central building was re-opened in 2003, with the conservation and adaptation work receiving a UNESCO Asia Pacific Heritage Award Honourable mention in 2004.

Other heritage buildings on the campus dating back to the early-1900s have also been carefully restored and adaptively re-used by the University both for teaching and administration - providing a welcoming learning environment.

“ UWS invites you during your visit to explore the Parramatta campus and take in the rich heritage that underpins a truly a modern, 21st century university. ”
